

Whiskey Springs Post Fire Restoration Status 10-27-2023 From Judy Meredith

End of another season of good happenings for us and for the birds and other wildlife. Some snow on the road and some ice closing up the white drainage pipe seem to indicate the end for visits for this year. Thanks to everyone for all the effort.

The water still overflows the tub and is in the ditch along the road.

At 11:38 am on Oct 27 it was 34 degrees here. The time taken for the dripping pipe to fill up the 1 cup measure:

46.38 seconds

46.91 seconds

48.19 seconds

Could be ice in the white pipe that impacts the measurement and also the abundance of trampling from wildlife that has changed the flow. The flow diversions are still in place, with puddling. Laurel I believe did this again.

Sorry, I forgot to check the rain gauge. The tub leans to the side more than I have noticed. I took the broom and measuring containers with me.

I am around just a few days and leave again for family matters. If you haven't sent your miles and hours to Sherrie, please do so soon. She is copied on this message so you have her contact info.

Only a Townsend's Solitaire was present today showing appreciation. I would like to think other wildlife hunkered down but were not seen by me.

Thanks to all,

Judy
